1. Attach (or send later) a letter (300-500 words) in which you describe the following: why you are attracted to ClayStone, your experiences in volunteering, travel and missions, a brief description of your discipleship journey with Jesus Christ, and any concerns you have about participating in ClayStone.

2. In addition to affirming the general mission of Crandall University and the expectations of community life standards as outlined in the University's Handbook, students successfully admitted into the ClayStone experience are also asked to affirm the following statement:
As a ClayStone student I affirm my responsibility to be respectful and supportive of the Christian discipleship objectives of the program as well as of its leadership and my fellow students. I understand that ClayStone is an experiential program and I will need to show flexibility in my approaches to learning as some of the experiences, while safe in nature, may bring me to the edge of my zone of comfort. I also understand and commit to extending the same respect I show to my program leaders and fellow students to the people of the various cultures to which I will be exposed as I participate in the ClayStone experience.
